A FINE SELECTION OF LIFE-SAVING MEDALS

LOT

401 Albert Medal in bronze for saving life on land, "Presented in the name of Her Majesty to Ambrose Clarke for gallantry in saving life in a sinking shaft, Rotherham Main, Yorks., 7th July, 1898", complete in original case of issue. Extremely fine. 1

∴ The award is accompanied by documentation, including a photostat of the Rotherham Advertiser dated 11th July, 1891.

AMBROSE CLARKE

On the 7th of July, 1891, an accident occurred in the sinking shaft of the Rotherham Main, situate near Rotherham, Yorks., the property of Messrs. John Brown & Co. This mishap resulted in the deaths of four persons and the escape of four others, all of them, however, more or less injured. Scaffolding was suspended in the shaft, 210ft. from the surface and about 90ft. from the bottom, by means of four chains, which were secured to four staples fixed in the shaft. There was a depth of 11ft. of water standing in the bottom of the shaft, immediately below the scaffold. Sinkers were engaged in removing the sheeting-bores in the shaft for the purpose of putting in brick walling; and at ten o'clock on the night of the 7th July eight men went down on to the scaffold. Ambrose Clarke, the master sinker, remained above, directing these men. He never left his post until 10.45 p.m., when he heard a noise below, but was ignorant of what had happened.

What had happened was this: One of the staples to which the supporting chains were attached suddenly broke, whereupon the scaffolding tilted, throwing all the men off. One of them, Scattergood by name, managed to get hold of the "hoppit" or iron bucket, into which the shafting-boards were being loaded, and in this he was drawn to the surface. There were steam pipes in the shaft in connection with the donkey-engine, and the falling scaffold broke one of these, filling the shaft with scalding steam.

When Clarke heard the uproar, he immediately ran across to the top of No. 2 sinking shaft, a few yards away, and told the man in charge that something dreadful had happened in No. 1, so that he had better draw his men out of No. 2 shaft at once. Clarke then rushed back to his post, and was just in time to see Scattergood emerge from the steaming inferno. Without waiting to ask any questions, Clarke asked Scattergood if he would go down with him, but the unfortunate man was too confused and shaken to think of anything. Clarke immediately went down by himself—down into the hot, blinding steam, still escaping with a shrill, continuous scream. When the solitary heroic rescuer got to the place where the scaffolding had hung, he found one man, Robert Drabble, suspended in the shaft in a peculiarly horrible manner. Drabble had evidently fallen head downwards, but had been caught by the hook of the grappling chain, which had entered the fleshy part of his leg, tearing in down to his boot, and fixing itself there. The point of the hook had actually penetrated the foot also and come out at the sole. All the other men had fallen to the bottom. Thus Drabble was hanging like a leg of mutton on a hook, head downwards in the darkness, the blood pouring from his terrible flesh wound, and with his hands on some fencing belonging to the donkey engine.

When Clarke arrived at this part of the shaft, some five or seven minutes had elapsed since the accident, and Drabble was calling feebly for help. On reaching him, Clarke said, "Now then, let me heave you into the hoppit," to which the suffering hero replied, "Not yet. Go down below and look after my mates in the water; I can hang a few minutes longer, I think."

Thereupon Clarke went to the bottom and rescued one man, Lovell, out of the water, and lifted him into the hoppit. At this time Drabble shouted from above that he was going to fall, so Clarke at once ascended to him and tried to cut the hook out of his boot, but could not succeed. He then put his arm round the man's leg and lifted him bodily up, whereupon the hook came out, and Drabble was safely deposited in the hoppit.

Subsequently, Clarke went down again and rescued another man named Beadsley, who was hanging over a stay just above the water with both legs broken. No more men could be found, so Clarke went to the surface with the three men he had saved. He afterwards went down a third time and, with the assistance of volunteers, succeeded in recovering the dead bodies of the remaining four men from the water at the bottom of the shaft.

The medals were presented to Clarke and Drabble by the Duke of Norfolk at a crowded and enthusiastic meeting.

402 Board of Trade medal in bronze, 58 mm. diameter (John Lewis, Wreck of the Zemira on Newcome Sand on the 7th October, 1858). As issued, without suspension, etc. Extremely fine. 1

403 Royal Humane Society's bronze medal, 38 mm. diameter, with scroll suspender (T. H. M. Barry, 19th February, 1926). Extremely fine. 1

∴ Complete with a supporting letter from the society which states that the recipient, who was serving as a steward aboard s.s. Waimanor, rescued James Revell in the Caribbean Sea. Revell fell overboard from the ship when on passage to New Zealand. T. H. M. Barry jumped into the water after him and, with a lifebuoy, held him up for 45 minutes, when a boat reached them. During this time there was considerable danger from sharks.

404 Another (John Lloyd Bozward, 11th June, 1867), with documentation from the society which indicates that the recipient saved Mary Ann Jones, aged 8, who had fallen into the River Severn at Worcester. Bozward jumped into the river clothed and saved the child. The recipient received a reward of £1.10.0 and the bronze medal. 1

405 Another, but the earlier larger issue, 51 mm. diameter (Charles Newnham, 31st July, 1856). Extremely fine. 1

∴ The supporting society documents show that Newnham, a retired builder, of Lambeth, saved George Savage, aged 14, from the River Thames at Lambeth. The lad was drawn out of his depth by the wash of a boat whilst bathing. Newnham went in with part of his clothing on and swam to his assistance and rescued him.

406 Another, large type (James McGeary, able seaman, HMS Malborough, 11th May, 1859). Very fine. 1

∴ The society's supporting documentation shows that McGeary was one of three aboard HMS Malborough at Malta who rescued seaman John Moore from the same ship. Moore accidentally fell from the topsail yard and his salvers jumped overboard, swam to his assistance and held him up until picked up by a boat. McGeary received the bronze medal and his assistants a document of thanks.

LOT

407 Another, but silver-plated bronze (David Kirk, Comd. Boatman, 30th June, 1847). The society's documentation indicates that David Kirk, commanding boatman of the Coastguard at Kerries, Co. Dublin, saved Anthony Smith. 1

408 Royal Humane Society's large silver medal, 51 mm. diameter (Frederick Burd, 13th December, 1844). Fine. 1

∴ F. BURD AND H. SANDFORD

On Friday, the 13th of December, 1844, two parties of young ladies were placed in extreme peril by the sudden breaking of the ice on a very deep part of Chetwynd Park Pool, near Newport, Salop. One of these parties consisted of three sisters. One of them, perceiving her sisters fall in, one on each side of her, started back and screamed for help. Alarmed by their cries, their brother, Henry Sandford, a youth of the age of sixteen, skated up to them from a considerable distance. Having partly rescued one sister, and left her to be held from sinking by a son of Mr. Stanley, of Newport, he hastened to the help of another sister, by whose struggles he was himself pulled into the water. Having extricated himself, though not able to swim, he at length succeeded in rescuing her when she became insensible and unable to continue her struggles. He then hastened to assist his friends, Mr. Frederick Burd, son of the Rev. George Burd, Minister of Cound, near Shrewsbury, and Mr. John Stanley (the conduct of both of whom was excellent), in completing the rescue of his other sister. Mr. Burd in the meanwhile had, by his own un-assisted exertions, rescued Miss Hathaway, when so far sunk that only her foot was left for his grasp. Unhappily, the exertions made to save the other young lady, the lamented Miss Chalmers, were not crowned with the same success.

The gamekeeper, who was unable to swim, had, with laudable but incautious eagerness to rescue the young lady from her extreme peril, plunged into the deep water with a rope which broke, and was himself with difficulty saved by a pole held to him by Messrs. Burd and Sandford, by whose united efforts he was drawn out.

409 Royal National Institution for the Preservation of Life from Shipwrecks' silver medal (William Askin, 18th February, 1829). Ring suspender. Very fine. 1

∴ William Askin was the only volunteer that accompanied the Coastguard boatman in saving the lives of the people on board the wreck of the steam packet Sheffield, wrecked at Ballywater, near Donaghadee.

LOT

The vessel had parted amidships on the return of the tide and the after part was swept away by the sea. To approach the rock was very dangerous and to go alongside the vessel was impossible. Philip Lithaby, Chief Boatman, succeeded in getting hold of a buoy with a rope attached to it, which he tied round his body, and by that means was drawn on board. After consulting with the Captain and Mate, it was agreed to get the main boom over the vessel's side and placed parallel to the foreyard. Over that dangerous and difficult passage he had the happiness of assisting all female and children passengers that were on board the vessel safely to the rock. By further perseverance and exertions, in about six hours every person on board was safely landed on shore. Captain Leslie recommends in the strongest terms the conduct of P. Lithaby, the Chief Boatman, and speaks with much praise of William Askin, the young man who volunteered to go off when no others would venture.

410 Another but later Victorian issue with George IV obverse, with dolphin suspender (Lieut. W. H. Elton, 7th February, 1867). Awarded whilst serving in the Coastguard. Extremely fine. 1

∴ During a heavy gale the officer and five men put off in a Coastguard galley, saving two men from the schooner 'Vulcan' and one man from the schooner 'Maria' near Lyme Regis.

411 Another (Samuel Bate, 2nd May, 1872). Extremely fine. 1

∴ Coxswain of the Padstow lifeboat. For gallant services when the boat was the means, after an arduous struggle, of saving seven persons from the barque 'Viking' of Sunderland.

412 The Tayleur Fund silver medal for the Succour of Shipwrecked Strangers (James Beer, HMS Ajax, for distinguished gallantry in saving of life at Kingstown, 9th February, 1861). Scarce, extremely fine. 1

413 Gallantry Fund Life Saving Medal (George Absolom, July 1895), in silver, with swivel suspender. Scarce, extremely fine. 1

414 Pair: Liverpool Shipwreck and Humane Society's medal, 25th September, 1915;

(9th May, 1838. Lieut. David Rymer, Royal Navy). 2

∴ An early life-saving pair for saving the lives of the crew of the 'Margaret' of Dundee off Berwick.
Entered the Navy 27th September, 1810. Lieut. 1825. In command in 1833 of the Coastguard station at Berwick. From 1838 in command of the Revenue vessel Mermaid. Died 1846.

416 Royal Life Saving Society's bronze medal (Sgt. C. Sweet, R.M.L.I., April 1908, and A. D. Spiers, Jnr., 1905). Extremely fine. 2

417 Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners Royal Benevolent Society's medal in silver, with dolphin suspender (W. Springal, 7th October, 1905). 1

∴ The society's letter that accompanies the medal indicates that Springal may have been one of the recipients of the medals presented to the skippers and crews of the steam trawlers 'St. Vincent' of North Shields, 'Queenstown', 'Clyde'' and 'Saturn' of Grimsby, and 'Sir Francis Drake' of Hull in the North Sea, and the s.s. 'Lyell' of North Shields for saving life in the Bay of Biscay.

418 Another (Charles Wilkinson, 1873). Extremely fine. 1

419 Liverpool Shipwreck and Humane Society's silver medal for gallant service (William R. Caley, s.s. Cymric, 31st July, 1915). Extremely fine. 1

420 Another (Alfred W. Miller, 10th March, 1912). Extremely fine. 1

450 The Order of the Garter. A Garter 19in. in length embroidered in gilt wire, complete with a gold plain buckle having a steel prong, circa 1840. In reasonable condition for its age, the bullion being sound, the velvet faded and worn. Scarce, very fine. 1

450A —— A Breast Star, circa 1800, in silver, etc., measuring a little more than $3\frac{3}{4}$in. across and in excess of $4\frac{1}{4}$in. from top to bottom. The eight sections of rays are hinged, each ray being cut or chased with central raised rib. The section at 4 o'clock has become detached, the remainder being a little loose or free in movement, indicating wear. Part of one ray in the 6 o'clock position has been broken off.

The central enamelled red cross and the surrounding blue enamel Garter are in gold and in original condition, a delicate chased border surrounding the outside of the Garter.

LOT

The reverse central gold plate is engraved in contemporary script, "Jeffreys and Gilbert, Goldsmiths and Jewellers to their Majesties". The reverses of the rays fitted with blue steel springs; the outer points of the three main rays of each section contain soldered gold bars incorporated to strengthen these vulnerable points.

∴ Extract from "The Afghan Campaigns of 1878-80"—Shadbolt:—

"In the storming of the Asmai heights on the 14th December, in the operations round Kabul, Captain Spens was in command of the sixty-four men of the 72nd, who, with the Guides Infantry, under Lieut.-Colonel Clarke, successfully assaulted and for a time held the little conical hill to the right of the main attack. It was while endeavouring to prevent this position from being retaken, in a heroic personal attempt to stem the advance of the overwhelming numbers of the enemy, that he sacrificed his life. The incident is thus related by one of his brother officers. After telling how the Afghans, reassembled and reinforced, had rushed up the side of the hill, and that a charge was ordered to be made by the Sepoys, the writer continues as follows: 'Spens volunteered to lead, which he did in splendid style. Heading a good way in front, he dashed at the leading files of the enemy, cut down the front man, and was immediately cut down himself by the enemy as they surged forward.' His body was recovered and was buried by his brother officers in the cemetery at Sherpur, the pipers of the regiment striking up 'Lochaber no more'—his favourite air—as it was lowered into the grave.

"'Spens behaved most gallantly,' wrote Sir Frederick Roberts, in a letter expressing a wish that it might have been possible to secure for the representatives of the deceased officer the Victoria Cross. The reflection that he was one who could not fail to acquit himself worthily when his opportunity might come, and that his death was therefore, under the circumstances, a necessity, is some poor consolation to his comrades in arms, by whom his memory will ever be held dear."

∴ During the night attack on 23/24 Oct., 1942, the platoon, of which the section which Cpl. Drummond commanded formed part, was held up by a strong enemy position surrounded by wire and from which a large number of stick grenades were being thrown. The platoon commander was killed and the platoon sergeant seriously wounded, and the attack at this point was in imminent danger of being held up. Cpl. Drummond immediately took command of the platoon and led a successful bayonet assault over the wire and into the enemy position—the surviving enemy thereupon surrendering. He thereafter reorganised the platoon without delay and continued the advance. But for Cpl. Drummond's action, his platoon would undoubtedly have suffered heavy casualties from the enemy post referred to and the attack would have been held up at that point. This action very materially assisted in enabling his company to reach the final objective. (London Gazette, 25.2.1943.)

"Throughout the campaign, Sergeant Hudson has carried out his duties as Troop Sergeant and Troop Commander in the most outstanding manner. His sound and determined leadership and resolute courage have been an example to all those about him.

"During a most difficult day's fighting in the mud of Holland, Sergeant Hudson set a fine example by bringing in a wounded man under fire and then on foot locating and killing the sniper. He was wounded shortly after this but remained in action till the end of the day.

"In a night attack for Appelhausen in Germany, Sergeant Hudson's tank was hit no less than three times by 88-mm. fire and, though forced to abandon the tank, he kept complete control of the troop and got them under cover. He later returned under fire, restarted the tank and drove it to safety, at the same time collecting his scattered troop and crew. His troop was in action again the following morning."

∴ M.M. citation:—

In the Mareth Line on the 20th March, 1943, Private Michael was a section leader in a platoon which was advancing to capture an enemy position which included three pillboxes and a trench system. His platoon commander had been injured on a mine and his platoon sergeant was in command. Extremely heavy enemy artillery, M.G. and mortar fire was encountered. Private Michael was responsible for clearing, initially, the pillboxes. On the following day it became obvious that the enemy were maintaining M.G. and sniper posts from trenches. A number of times Private Michael led attacks on the pillboxes in which the enemy had organised small pockets of resistance. Two days later, a withdrawal order having been received, Private Michael's section covered a flank, enabling two companies to withdraw in comparative safety. In this, his section was instrumental in drawing enemy fire upon themselves, to facilitate this withdrawal. Private Michael's conduct throughout was of the highest order. His leadership and dash contributed very largely to his platoon maintaining its hold on a very difficult objective.

On 11th June, 1944 at St. Pierre, Cpl. Michael's company was ordered to restore the situation on the right flank of the Bn., which had been pushed back as a result of an enemy counter-attack. Cpl. Michael's platoon commander was killed and his platoon sergeant missing. Cpl. Michael immediately took over command and under extremely heavy M.G. and artillery fire continued to lead his platoon forward. Twice they were pinned to the ground by fire, but each time Cpl. Michael found a way round until their objective was reached. Here he immediately organised the defence of the position, which was successfully held.

Cpl. Michael throughout the action displayed great personal courage and fine powers of leadership, and it was due to his actions and personal example that the task was successfully accomplished.

COIN CATALOGUES

On the average we issue twelve or more Coin Catalogues each year, some of which are usually of sales of important collections.

CATALOGUE SUBSCRIPTIONS

PRE-SALE CATALOGUES, frequently illustrated, are normally posted to subscribers about three weeks prior to the date of Sale.

PRICED CATALOGUES (not illustrated) are issued after each Sale with the prices realised printed in the margin opposite each Lot, thus giving at a glance a reliable guide to values. The final test of value must always be auction prices rather than the figures given in books of reference, for changing times and fashions soon render the latter obsolete and misleading.

The Priced Catalogues are posted to subscribers as soon as ready, usually about three weeks after the date of Sale.

Subscription Rates

(commencing from 1st January)

Pre-Sale Coin Catalogue	.....	£1.00 per annum
Priced „ „	.....	£2.00 „ „

(Reductions for new subscribers commencing after 1st April.)

All subscriptions expire on 31st December, and renewal reminders are issued. Catalogues of past Sales cannot be supplied.

AIR MAIL

To allow subscribers resident outside Europe time to submit postal bids, Pre-Sale Catalogues will, if desired, be sent by Air Mail. Air Mail postage is not, however, included in the Subscription Rate and must be borne by the subscriber In such cases an additional £2.00 should be sent as a deposit and we will advise when this is exhausted.
